Apprentices join the union

Become a member of the largest trade union in the country

Time and time again it has been proven that workers in workplaces where there is an organised union get far better pay and terms and conditions than those that aren't in a union.

Unite the Union has members across most companies in financial services. Unite is dedicated to serving the best interests of its members and will seek to improve their standard of living and the quality of their lives through effective relationships with employers and government.

Young workers are most likely to be vulnerable to exploitation as some employers assume that they are less likely to know their rights. One in four young workers has experienced bullying and 53 per cent fear they can't support a family on their wages.

Unite makes a difference to the working environment of apprentices. Where there is union organisation, we ensure that apprentices have a voice to air concerns. Unite also campaigns to get better rights at work for apprentices.

Unite is campaigning for the different apprenticeship minimum wages to be increased to the same level as for other young workers.
