What is Reduced Income Benefit?

Reduced Income Benefit is a set amount per day for members who have been absent from work, but still employed, and their gross taxable income has been reduced by 50% or more or you are only in receipt of SSP or SMP. The benefit payable is the difference between the Basic level of subscription based on your membership type indicated in the table above (excluding additional benefits and branch funds) and €0.65 per week. Qualifying members receive the relevant daily rate which is based on 5 days in a working week, minus a 7 day qualification period.

Do you qualify?

A policy and guidance document is available online.

You can claim this benefit if:

- you are employed; and
- you have been absent from work for longer than 7 days due to ill health, injury, maternity leave, paternity leave, adoption leave, shared parental leave, careers break, sabbatical, carer's leave or extended bereavement; and
- your gross taxable pay has been reduced by 50% or more or if you are only in receipt of SSP (Statutory Sick Pay) or SMP (Statutory Maternity Pay); and
- you have paid for a membership type (listed in the table above) for at least 13 weeks before the start of your absence; and
- your membership is not in arrears or lapsed.

Guidance Notes

- Reduced Income Benefit cannot be claimed for the same period as any sickness or parental leave benefits. Enhanced members should claim sickness or parental leave benefits first and then immediately start a claim for Reduced income benefit if they qualify.
- Reduced Income Benefit can be claimed for past absences within 52 weeks from date of application and up to 3 months into the future. Where future absences are expected to last for longer than 3 months, i.e. maternity leave or due to serious illness or injury, Unite will pay you a lump sum in advance based on the calculations in the table above, up to a maximum of three months. You will receive this every 3 months and will only need to apply once if you have the appropriate documentation.
- If you are unemployed or retired please contact your local office and request to join a Back to Work, Community or Retired Member Plus membership scale for just €0.65 a week.
- Payment will be made into your bank account. We do not send cheques.
