THE CUT TO UNIVERSAL CREDIT IS A CUT TO OUR COMMUNITY

Rishi Sunak cancelled Christmas for 5.5m people

The chancellor stole Christmas when he cut £20 a week from Universal Credit and our MP let this happen.

We want the Tories to give it back and give it to all claimants, and here’s why:

1. It wasn’t enough in the first place: The UK social security system is now worth just 14% of average earnings compared to 70% in Spain.

2. The UK is too expensive to live: energy bills, food and rents are rocketing.

3. Poverty isn’t permanent: Universal Credit is a temporary lifeline when we hit hard times. Most claimants are back in work within a year. Starvation level benefits don’t help.

4. It could happen to you: anyone can become ill, lose their job, or have a relationship breakdown. That’s why we need a fairer safety net – we’re a rich country and can afford it.

THE CUT TO UNIVERSAL CREDIT IS A CUT TO OUR COMMUNITY

The chancellor’s cruel cut is an attack on ordinary people. Nearly half of people on Universal credit are in work. They are our nation’s care workers, refuse collectors, teaching assistants, NHS workers, as well as people who are disabled or have caring responsibilities. It doesn’t have to be this way.

TAKE ACTION

Write to your Tory MP and tell them to give the £20 back and strengthen our safety net! You never know when you might need it. Find your MP here: unitetheunion.org/UC20GiveItBack
